THE INVASION OF CUBA.

writer in the New York Tribune gives us to understand that "quite a large number, · mostly of young men of a reckless stamp, ready 'for any thing, from 'storming h- down to 'robbing a'hen-roost,' are enlisted in this enterprise;" but, he adds, "they are encouraged by older men, who enjoy high social positions, and who are looked up to for better things."

The Tribune is very severe in its denunciations of this contemplated measure, and sees in its consummation nothing but the extension of the area of slavery. We have our apprehensions also, but from different views. We fear, in the first place, that, however earnestly the Executive of our Nation may desire to prevent the equipment of an army on our shores, the success of such an undertaking may affect the neutral position of our Government. In the second place, we fear for the fate of all who shall embark upon the enterprise, for they will have no refuge in the event of its final failure.

These are all the fears and all the scruples we have on the subject.

We are clear in our convictions that the condition of both races would be improved by the independence of Cuba. The white man would at once emerge into the light of liberty, of political power, and moral and intellectual elevation; and the condition of the slave, in his state of slavery, would be as promptly modified, and his preparation for the great work of the age-the colonization and civilization of Africa-would be immeasurably facilitated. If the tendency of this scheme, its feasibility, the question of right and wrong as connected with it, and the results of success and of failure, were calmly and fairly presented to the minds of our people, and argued, much good would proceed from it. But as it is, there is nothing but covert scheming and action, looking very much like guilt, on the one side, while the denunciations of the other are made as though the servile fear of offending the ruling powers prevents the faithful examination and analysis that other questions receive. The former is undoubtedly wrong; but-we hope we may be pardoned for saying it—the latter is assuredly insincere. The American who asserts that he does not wish to see Cuba in the enjoyment of republican freedom is either deceptive in his declaration, or no true republican himself. The means of rendering her so are all that are to be looked at. This is revolution; and if it can be made successful, the American who can aid in it without compromising his own Government will thus render good service to his species. But its importance admonishes us to repeat that, in the event of failure, every man concerned will have good need to regret most heartily that he had not, instead, undertaken to storm the infernal citadel named by the writer we have quoted.

MR. TUPPER AND THE PHILADELPHIA

We have casually noticed the attack of the Ledger upon this gentleman, and, not wishing to see him wholly demolished, again venture a few words in his defence.

Mr. Tupper is an accomplished, liberal-minded Englishman, born and educated in a monarchy, and having, very naturally, strong predilections in favor of the religion and government of his native land. Bred, not "in profound ignorance of our country, and among circles in which questions are sometimes raised about the complexion and language of the Americans," as has soon destroyed, with nearly all their furniture, been facetiously said by the above-named jour- although the fire companies were prompt in nal, but in the society of enlightened men, who their efforts to save. These houses were twoview with pleasure the advancement of the story frames, and belonged to Captain Guy. world in knowledge and freedom,-his attention is naturally attracted to our country, progressing, as it has been, in all that can elevate humanity. Daily he hears most wonderful accounts of the almost miraculous development of our nation, and is seized with a strong desire to visit it, and compare it with his own muchloved land. He comes predisposed to approve and admire. He lands upon our shores, and, without noise or display, proceeds to traverse the country. But he does not go in peace. From all quarters the self-appointed censors of the land open upon him with denunciations loud and deep, and the people are told that he is a second Dickens, come to spy out our faults and misrepresent our virtues. His declarations are disregarded. He avers that he does not intend to write a book about us. "It is false," they say; "all other Englishmen, who have traveled in this country, have written against us; Tupper is an English traveller, and therefore he intends to write against us!" By this clear, syllogistic argument, they convince themselves that he is nothing but a malignant English spy; and as a spy they treat him. Forgetting that, in America, freedom of speech is permitted to every one, they condemn him to perpetual silence. He may look on, but not candid opinion in regard to us, and to compare our institutions with what he esteems the safer ones of his own country, he is pounced upon and straightway devoured.

Now, of this we by no means approve. Mr. Tupper has, no doubt, as other men have, strong prejudices, and many wrong ones; but should the list of passengers is Dr. Alex. J. Semmes. we therefore conclude that he is an enemy to of Georgetown, D. C. our country, a slanderer of our institutions, and all the other terrible things which some would have us think him? Years ago they were all overflowing with love for the English traveller, until Dickens paid them off with his "American Notes." Since then they have been on the other extreme, and an Englishman can scarce show his face among us, without being transatlantic malignity.

As to Mr. Tupper's being "sacred to ridicule his whole life long," because he takes the liberty of expressing, to those who ask him, his opinion of us and our form of Government, we think the idea absurd. How, we ask, shall foreigners behave when they come among us? Shall they openly declare themselves our enemies, and abuse us for every thing that is despicable and foolish? Shall they, on the other hand, laud great abundance.

us to the skies, agree that our form of Government is perfect, whether they believe it or not, and tell us that we have left them far behind ! Or shall they, as Mr. Tupper has done, when requested to give an opinion, praise what they approve, and express their disapprobation of what they think defective? The latter course seems to us the best, though others seem to think differently.

Let us, then, permit Mr. Tupper quietly to pursue his journey. He came among us with feelings of friendship; let him continue to entertain them; and, when he departs from our shores, let him bear with him to his home a favorable impression of the magnanimity of the American people.

THE CAPITOL.

Among the various improvements now going on within and around the Capitol, under the direction of our enterprising and go-ahead Commissioner, there is one which pleases every body-namely, the taking up and relaying the flagging and capping of the terraces. The steps, which are also in a deranged condition, as well as the flagging in the western park, will no doubt be put in proper order. The gravel walks might also be improved by the removal of the coarser stones, and the passing of Mr. Maher's large roller over them a few times immediately after a rain.

CHRIST CHURCH, GEORGETOWN.—This church was densely filled last night, and the discourse delivered by the Rev. Mr. D. CALDWELL, the pastor, was one of great power and fervor. "It is finished," were the appropriate words of his text, and the death of Christ and the Atonement the subjects upon which he dwelt.

It is seldom that so decided an impres has been made upon a community as has been made by Mr. C.; and it gives us great pleasure to learn that his health, which had previously been enfeebled, has improved within the brief period of his residence here.

He will, in the course of next week, return to his former home, in Virginia, for the purpose of removing his family to Georgetown, which, however, he may not be prepared to accomplish for one or two months, when he will again be gladly welcomed to the pastoral charge he has

THE COSDEN MURDERS .- There was much excitement at Havre-de-Grace yesterday, owing to the capture of Nicholas Murphy, charged with the murder of the Cosden family, at Georgetown Cross-Roads, in Kent county, Maryland. GEORGETOWN, April 19-104 a. m. No material change has taken place in the condition of Archbishop Eccleston since my last; and although all is being done for him that medical skill and kind friends can accomplish, he continues gradually to sink, and no hopes are entertained this morning of his recovery.

There is at present quite a revival of religion in the Methodist Episcopal Church here. The meetings have been continued every night this week, and some twelve to fifteen have united with the church.

The news by the last steamer has caused flour to advance in price. Wheat and corn have also advanced.

The supply of stock at Drover's Rest for the week has been limited. 80 head of cattle were taken by Georgetown and Washington butchers at 4@4lc. gross.

There have been several arrivals of fish the wharf. Prices remain unchanged. No arrivals. Barque William Chase, (Jones master.) cleared for St. Thomas.

ARRIVAL OF THE PROMETHEUS.

Later from California—Two Millions of Gold Dust arrived—Lynch Law—Destruction of the City of Nevada-The Markets, &c. New York, April 18th-11 p. m. - The steamer Prometheus arrived this evening from Chagres with two hundred and sixty passen-gers. The New Orleans had arrived at Panama on the 1st of April, with $600,000 in gold; the Northerner with $800,000, and the Antelope with $600,000, which was all at Chagres when the Prometheus sailed.

Lynch law appears to prevail to a considerable extent. Two men who gave their names as James Backster, of Maine, and Charles Sim mons, of Massachusetts, were peremptorily hung by the populace, near Consumes river, for

to leave the country and murdered. From Mr. J. Cavalry Hall, of Granada, Nicaragua, who came passenger to New Orleans in the steamer Mexico, the Picayune has obtained late and important news to the 5th instant from Nicaragua and the so-called Mosquito kingdom: Since the last trip of the Prometheus, that is, within about six weeks, a feeling of hostility of so decided a character has sprung up against this country, that the Americans on the Isthmus, from Realejo to San Juan, have thought it best for their interests and personal safety to leave. About eight hundred of them, who had established themselves in the towns and villages, and who confided in the friendship and protection of the Nicaraguan government, have been so ill-treated—the natives refusing to buy from them or sell them provisions—that they all broke up their business arrangements, many at much loss to themselves, came down to San Juan, and embarked for this port or New York. The main spring of this sudden revulsion of feeling lies in the continual intrigues of the Consul at San Juan, and his colleague, Foster, at Realejo. He and his fellows have at last sucat Realejo. He and his fellows have at last succeeded in strongly prejudicing the Nicaraguan authorities and citizens against the Americans.

The best proof of this sudden and decided hostility is in the fact that fifteen of our coun-

have been murdered within the last twenty-five days, on the road from Realejo, on the Pacific, across to San Juan, where they forrapidly as possible out of the country to return

It is certainly time that our government should take decisive steps, if not to put down these absurd protectorate claims of England in Nicaragua, at least to protect the lives and pro perty of our citizens there. We should have a consul—an energetic, determined man—in the country; whilst the frequent visits to San Juan of an American vessel of war would tend materially to restrain British machinations and Nicaraguan aggressions.
